Mike is an urban designer with 20 years of experience preparing community plans for downtowns, waterfronts, campuses, infill and greenfield neighbourhoods. Mike works at the intersection of planning, built form, transportation, urban ecology and public realm design to create integrated urban frameworks that foster human and ecological health.

Much of his work is framed around extensive public and stakeholder consultation processes. Mike's design solutions balance the diverse viewpoints of municipal, agency, Council, ratepayer, and business representatives to create pragmatic, implementable and flexible guiding frameworks. Mike has supported the community visioning process through the preparation of master plans, design guidelines, and visualizations.
